Contents

1 Welcome!

2 Taking time to consider the meaning of life

Our profession has a long way to go in completely recognising that spirituality is at the core, says John Eatock

4 APSCC update

Website, task groups, conference, membership and networking news

4 Letters

Lively responses to articles in the summer issue of Thresholds

6 Spiritual accompaniment for our times

Institutional religion has entered the doldrums and subjective experience cries out for validation, says Brian Thorne. We need spiritual companions who are unafraid of human uniqueness and unthreatened by differences of background, belief and temperament

9 Unheard stories

Penny Johnson shares a tale of two women

DIANA ONG/GETTY

NELLY CHARBONNEAU/GETTY

11 And there are no more words

Chris Jenkins considers the varieties of silence experienced by counsellors and clients, and how an awareness of them may improve the therapeutic encounter

14 The Holy Trinity and Rogers' core conditions

It is through our relationship with God, who offers unconditional positive regard, empathy and congruence, that we discover our true humanity, says Michael Stagg

17 Supervising with spirit

Gill Carding reports on the first annual APSE conference

18 The spiritual dimension of advocacy

Geoff Morgan has been researching the faith and spiritual care aspects of advocacy in relation to mental health. Salma Khalid was inspired
