The impact of personal loss on the clinical work of newly bereaved psychodynamic therapists. A Reflexive Thematic Analysis

This study is inviting psychodynamic or psychoanalytic therapists who have experienced a significant bereavement within the past 6 months to 3 years. It explores how therapists make sense of their loss and how grief may influence their therapeutic practice.

The project forms part of a postgraduate dissertation in Psychodynamic Practice at the University of Oxford.

I am seeking participants who:

- are qualified psychodynamic/psychoanalytic therapists
- were in practice for at least 2 years before the bereavement
- continued working clinically at some point during their bereavement
- experienced their bereavement 6 months to 3 years ago

Please note: this study does not involve NHS therapists or NHS clinical material.

If you are interested in taking part or would like more information, please get in touch.
