Dear Sir Andrew,

Re: NICE guideline on the Recognition and Management of Depression in Adults

As you are aware, a coalition of highly-respected individuals and organisations within the mental health sector have highlighted a number of fundamental methodological issues with the current draft NICE Guideline on the Recognition and Management of Depression in Adults as detailed in the attached briefing.

We appreciate that the guideline draft will now be revised a third time and we understand that you recently convened a second meeting with the stakeholder group, chaired by an independent methodologist, to explore and discuss their concerns. Following this meeting, NICE agreed to “look again at the issues raised by the stakeholders”.

As stressed previously, we do acknowledge that there is a range of opinion on some of the issues the group is raising. However, we believe that the strong opposition to the proposed changes from such a wide-ranging and growing stakeholder coalition should be taken seriously.

The consequences of not addressing the methodology underpinning the new draft guideline are that millions of people suffering from depression will be discriminated against through misleading treatment recommendations. There will also be a damaging impact on services, the mental health workforce, and the way in which research on depression is conducted in the future.

We have therefore come together to express our ongoing support of the attached position statement. Following the constructive recent meeting with stakeholders we urge you to meaningfully respond to the repeatedly raised concerns and to address all of these adequately in the proposed third revision of the guideline.

We look forward to your prompt reply.

Yours Sincerely,

Barbara Keeley MP
